Supporting vision researchers: From practice to passion

Takenori Inomata, MD, PhD, MBA received a travel grant for Japanese researchers through the ARVO Foundation in 2012. Today, he is studying corneal transplantation immunology and dry eye diseases. He credits the ARVO Annual Meeting experience with providing him with innovative ideas and the motivation to continue challenging the unknown in ophthalmologic sciences.

Your gift to the ARVO Foundation helps young researchers put their scientific passion into practice with initiatives like

- Online research training
- Leadership and career development programs
- Travel grants and fellowships

We're within $4,000 of our $25,000 goal. Can you help us get there?

Thank you for your generous donation.
